RUSSIAN RAILWAYS
BIG FAMINE FACTORDisorganization of Roads
Makes Distribution of Food Impossible.

By the Associated Press. RIGA, Latvia, July 18.—Chief among the causes of the threatened famine in soviet Russia this year, which bolshevik newspapers themselves admit is likely to be even worse than last year, is the utter disorganization of the railway traffic. This disorganization has become worse, despite efforts of the soviet government to alleviate it.

Little or none of the locomotives and other railway equipment ordered from abroad has as yet arrived. The inadequate supply of workable rolling stock has, in the meantime, been even further depleted by the necessity of fulfilling peace treaties which soviet Russia made with the Baltic states, such as Latvia. To these states Russia has turned over scores of locomotives, hundreds of cars and other equipment, much of which had been taken from the Baltic states by the czarist and provisional governments of Russia in their hasty military evacuations before the advancing Germans.

Roadbeds Deteriorated. Added to this shortage of equipment is an almost generally prevailing condition of deteriorated roadbeds. The commissariat of communications, says a Moscow dispatch taken from various bolshevik newspapers, is expecting soon a new railway traffic crisis. The tracks are so much in need of repair that next spring, officials say, it will be dangerous to travel on many lines. Embankments have sunk down, ties are rotten, rails are worn out. If the chief forest committee is not able to supply, by the beginning of 1922 nearly 15,000,000 ties, it will be necessary to interrupt traffic on some main lines. Even if it were possible to get the necessary materials, says the dispatch, it is probable that through scarcity of labor or some other unexpected crisis it will be necessary to stop traffic on some branch lines. On double-track lines only one track is to be repaired, stripping the other track of its rails to do this, in order to have at least a fairly efficient single track.

Small Revenue. The railway commissariat has little revenue because most travelers are government officials and very seldom are traveling as private persons. To travel one must get a pocket full of permits, unless he can bribe his way through the bureaucracy. The chances with the mobs riding on the tops of trains carrying bags of food to the cities, practically no one pays fares, but the government has just instituted a new tariff, by which it hopes to charge for tickets. In bolshevik rubles, about two thousand times the fares prevailing in 1917. The railway commissariat budget calls for the expenditure of 348,000,000 rubles for 1921, and shows no expected revenue. To transport sufficient food to the cities is one problem; to produce in factories sufficient articles of daily necessities for the peasants is another. This latter task is admittedly difficult. The government estimates that for the manufacture of tradeable articles of the value of 180,000,000 of goods (each thirty-six pounds) of grain, speakers before the food supply conference at Moscow expressed the opinion, bolshevik newspapers themselves say, that the government would be lucky to get by this means half of that estimate.

Imports Essential. Brukanoff, speaking at the conference, gave what he said was accurate data of the decrease in industry in comparison with pre-war times. The 1920 production, he said, of iron ore was 24 per cent of pre-war; salt, 17 per cent; coal, 20 per cent; cotton, 24 per cent; other raw iron, 2 to 3 per cent; cotton manufactures, 5 to 6 per cent; linens, 25 per cent; matches, 15 per cent; sugar, 6 per cent and tobacco, 5 per cent. "Therefore," said Brukanoff, "home manufactures will in no way be sufficient for goods exchanged with the peasants. From abroad must be imported at least eight million tons of goods, but under present circumstances this is impossible."

Halatoff, one of the actual directors of supply, said the government would be lucky to get from all sources 300,000,000 poods, and, therefore, either foreign imports or decreased rationing would be necessary. Complicating both the food and transport crises, is the extremely serious fuel shortage, causing, on one hand curtailment of rail traffic, and, on the other, the closing down of factories. By imports from abroad the government is endeavoring to get coal to operate the factories, but while the three international was approving the English strike the strike was delaying shipments of coal to Petrograd for this purpose.

DODGE CHARITY HALTED.

Debts of Late General Exceed Estate's Assets.

NEW YORK, August 6.—Debts of the estate of the late Gen. Charles C. Dodge exceed its assets and will prevent the formation of a corporation to dispense charitably the income from his stockholdings in the Eastern Case Cod and New York canal, as provided in his will. This announcement was included in the report made public by T. Ludlow Christie, referee appointed to settle a difference between Gen. Dodge's son, Charles Stewart Dodge, and certain claimants of stock owned by the estate. The claims were not approved. The referee reports that many debts of the estate had already been settled by Charles Stewart Dodge and his sister, Mrs. Mary E. C. Dodge, of San Francisco, N. Y., out of their own pockets and advised the sale of the remaining 1,375 shares of Case Cod Canal stock to reimburse them.

JUGOSLAVIA SEEKS LOAN.

500,000,000 Gold Francs Needed to Build Seaport.

BELGRADE, Jugoslavia, August 4.—The national assembly has authorized the minister of finance to negotiate a foreign loan of 500,000,000 gold francs with which to construct a seaport on the Adriatic. As security the Jugoslav government will pledge the enterprise and part of the government's revenue.

NAMES RAGGED STRANGER

Edward Ryan Was Murder Victim, According to Mother.

CHICAGO, August 6.—The "ragged stranger," for whose murder Carl O. Wanderer is under sentence to be hanged, today was given a name, when Mrs. Nellie Ryan said that the body was that of her son, Edward Ryan, twenty-four. Mrs. Ryan said she had known for many months that the ragged stranger was her son, but that she and her daughters had kept the secret for reasons of their own. For more than twenty years, during which time Wanderer has been tried twice and convicted of murder, first being sentenced to twenty years in the penitentiary for killing his wife and unborn child, and then to death for slaying "the poor hook" who employed to stage a mock hold-up, the identity of the stranger has been masked in mystery. Wanderer was to have been hanged July 30, but was granted a reprieve until September 15 by Gov. Len Small.
